BAPTIST ORATORS PLAN A CONTEST TOMORROW NIGHT

Service Will Be One of Worship and Also of Devotion

LEADS TO OTHERS

Pastors Give Sermon Topics; Special Music Is Announced

The Baptist Young People's Union of First Baptist Church will at the evening service tomorrow at 7.45, take part in an oratorical contest.

The Baptist young people through the state are engaged in the oratorical contest. These contests originate in the local churches. The subject is "Christian Stewardship." The one selected as the best speaker in this B. Y. P. U. will compete in the northeast district on Thursday evening in the Holmesburg Baptist Church. The winner in the district will compete in the City Union and so on to the state final at Bucknell University, Lewisburg. The state winner receives a scholarship to Bucknell. The judges of the local contest Sunday evening are unannounced. However, they are not to be members of the Baptist church or congregation.

The contest is not to be regarded as a secular affair. The service will be one of worship and devotion. The speeches are in reality 10 minute sermons. The whole plan is a project of B. Y. P. U. leaders to interest young people in definite Christian service.

Sunday School at this edifice will begin at 10 a. m., with John D. Weik, superintendent, in charge. Morning worship and sermon will be at 11, topic of the pastor, the Rev. Howard L. Zepp, "A Door of Hope in Time of Trouble."

St. James's P. E. Church

Services for Sunday: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9.30, Church School; 10.45, morning prayer and sermon; 7.45, evening prayer and sermon. At the 10.45 a. m. service the Rev. G. L. Gibbs, of Germantown, will be in charge and preach. The rector will preach in the evening.

The Mothers' Guild meets on Tuesday at the parish house as usual.

Ash Wednesday services: 9.30 a. m., Litany, penitential office and communion; eight, evening prayer and sermon.

Friday being the day of world-wide prayer there will be communion and meditation in the church starting at 9.30. Lenten folders giving a complete schedule of services will be at the back of church for every communicant.

The rector hopes that during the Lenten season everyone will place a coin in a box each time he eats a meal, in silent thanksgiving to God. This offering should be presented at Easter. The rector will be grateful for the names of any new families who visit the church or who would like to become connected with the church. Confirmation instruction will start March 19th in the church.

Harriman M. E. Church

Sunday School, 10 a. m., William H. Wilkinson, superintendent; morning worship, 11; Children's Bible Study, seven p. m.; evening worship, 7.45. Rev. G. W. Shires is pastor.

Sunday evening the Brotherhood will meet in the basement of the church at 7.30 then proceed to evening worship in a body.

Monday evening regular meeting of the Brotherhood in the basement of the church at 8 p. m. The Matrons Society will also meet with the Brotherhood to discuss plans for the formation of a dramatic club.

On Tuesday the Ladies' Aid will have its second doughnut sale. Orders will be taken and delivered. Call 3101, 3906 or 2428. The women are asked to be prompt as possible in order to get promised deliveries made by noon. On Wednesday evening, the Matrons Society will have its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Helen Campbell, 1805 Farragut avenue, at eight.

Presbyterian Church of Our Saviour
Rev. Andrew G. Solla, minister—morning worship, in Italian, 11; Sunday School, 2.30, Thomas Harper in charge; evening worship, eight o'clock.

Monday night, Boy Scouts; prayer meeting will be held Wednesday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Rago, 901 Inlet street.

The young people will meet on Thursday night, Junior Christian Endeavor will be held Friday night.

The religious service in Italian will be broadcasted as usual over Station WLIT on Thursday, at 2.45. All the other activities will take place as usual during the week.

Bristol M. E. Church

Rev. Leslie H. Kiefer will be the guest preacher at morning service in Bristol M. E. Church. Lent will be appropriately observed, with the initial service Wednesday evening when the meditation will be "If." The minister, Rev. Clarence Howell, will ex-

SCHOOL BOARDS DON'T CONTROL EXPENDITURES

Member of Hulmeville Board Takes Issue With Speakers

IS LESS APPROPRIATION

By Richard A. Hopkins

(President, Hulmeville School Board)

I have noted during the last several months that there has been a continuous and vicious attack on the local School Boards in regards to expenses. The climax came in your paper yesterday in a speech reported as having been made by Hibbs Buckman to the County Road Supervisors.

Last week there was also reported a speech made by a woman to the Bucks County Womens Republican Club in which she quoted figures showing an increase in School Taxes over other taxes. To the average layman who does not go behind the figures to find where they came from or who wrote them, they propagate the wrong idea of the actual.

For the General Public the idea that must be foremost is the knowledge that the local School Board is not the sole agency of the expenditure, but is governed by the so called Edmonds Act. This act governs the largest part of the expenditures and the local board must follow it in order that they can share in the State appropriations.

And remember that while Mr. Buckman has been making speeches, to rouse the people to fight their local representative on the School Board the Legislature has cut our allowance which means that any economies that can be made cannot be passed on to the taxpayer. Now there is no doubt that reductions are in order but the facts involved must be taken into consideration. Why should the school and other local governments be made the goat when road appropriations are being raised—or why can't the Legislature and Judiciary salaries be cut as well. I know they are set by an act of Legislature but so is the school appropriation. If one can be cut why not the other? Why should schools be cut and in the same breath roads be taken over for betterment? These roads could easily wait for a year or two and the money used to help local governments and relieve the taxpayer. There is no doubt as to the value of schools over roads from any point of view.

We know that the tax for roads comes from a direct source but the local governments have no way of getting money so easy. If the schools are to continue in their present level, and they must if we are to continue as a republic, then the State Legislature must make some change to permit a reduction on local real estate tax.

The new School Code will mean less appropriation from the State in about 75% of the present districts and of course this means a reduction in the present school standard or an increase in the local taxes. Granting that some of the districts are unable to carry on or are in dire straits and that some relief should be accorded them, but why take it away from those who are now hanging on by their nails. Why not some relief by the use of some of the roads funds? I believe that the Governor could make just as many friends this way as by his road program.

It must be understood that the local Director does not get a salary and therefore is not interested except from an administrative point of view. I have talked with a large number both here and at the Directors Convention at Harrisburg and can't understand the attitude that is taken by the speakers during the last several months. The

OPPOSITION TO MACHADO'S DICTATORIAL REGIME RESULTS IN THE FORMATION OF CURIOUS SECRET SOCIETY KNOWN TO ALL OF CUBA AS THE "ABC"

Group Credited With Most of Terroristic Activities in Island

NUMBERED AT 5,000

Even Meaning of Symbols Generally Unknown; Many Explanations

(This is the fourth of a series of stories based upon a first-hand survey of present conditions in Cuba. To avoid possible Cuban censorship, the articles were written and sent from Miami.)

By George R. Holmes
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1933, by I. N. S.)

MIAMI, Feb. 25.—(INS)—Popular opposition to the dictatorial regime of President Machado in Cuba has resulted in the organization of a curious society known as "ABC."

To this group is accredited most of the terroristic activities against the Machado administration, which have included bombings of public buildings, and a dozen assassinations of public officials, the most prominent of whom was Dr. Vasquez Bello, president of the Cuban Senate, and a prime favorite of the President's.

All Havana, now under martial law and drastic censorship, and all Cuba for that matter, knows of the "ABC." But who composes it, and the extent of its organization are matters that are in dispute.

The most reliable authority in the island estimates the strength of the "ABC" as upwards of 5,000 persons, both men and women. Some of them, many in fact, are students; some are intellectuals, some labor leaders, and some out-and-out radicals.

It is a secret organization, and even the meaning of the symbols "ABC" is generally known. Many explanations can be had about the sidewalk cafes of Havana as to the meaning of the letters. But the most commonly accepted is that each letter stands for a particular group of bitter and implacable enemies to President Machado and his dictatorship.

Thus "A" would represent a group of intellectuals who decide upon the major questions of policy in reprisals against the Machado regime for its unconstitutional acts; "B" an executive group which plans these violent reprisals; and "C" a younger group of radicals and students who actually carry out the violence.

Between the "ABC" and the Machado secret police there is unending warfare. Killing is matched with killing, with the government forces thus far having the best of it so far as numbers are concerned.

The Machado government claims that the organization is anarchistic and nihilistic, and that it is dictated by Communist sympathizers. But a good many responsible authorities in Havana do not concede this. They do concede that there are some radicals in the organization, that some, in fact, may be Communists, but they contend

POLICE SHATTER SHINING RECORD OF EX-CONVICT

"Lew" Edwards Nabbed For Robberies, Former Perkasio Man

DID A FINE BUSINESS

"Reform" Hailed As Remarkable; Confesses Training Bandits

"Lew" Edwards, whose shining example as an ex-convict who had reformed and "gone straight" was shattered by the Philadelphia police when he was nabbed in connection with several sensational robberies, is a former Perkasio business man.

Known as James Sanders to Perkasio residents the ex-penitentiary inmate built up a large business in the North Penn town, manufacturing model ships. His plant was destroyed by fire on January 25, 1930, the loss at the time being estimated at $30,000.

Some time later Sanders left Perkasio and was no more heard from until he was recognized by Perkasio residents as the Philadelphia bandit who was recently taken into custody. William Manley, one of the bandits arrested with Sanders, was also well known to Perkasio as a friend of the model ship builder.

Sanders, more properly known as Edwards, first went to Perkasio as a business man starting up a new venture, and saying nothing about his past life, much of which had been spent eluding the police, and in serving prison sentences. He established his business, and built it up to a point of being one of importance in the community.

Some time later, rumors were heard that he was a former convict, but little was thought of this angle, as he was then, apparently, an exemplary business man, and was, in all probability, making out well in an honest venture.

The fire, believed to have started from an explosion in one of the painting rooms, swept the entire plant, destroying most of the models, many of which were ready for shipment to European concerns.

Edwards first came to the public notice by constructing ship models by hand while serving six years of a twenty-four year prison sentence in the Eastern Penitentiary. He was a notorious confidence man, and a sensational jail breaker, with a long criminal record.

His attitude during his last prison term, however, was such as to completely disarm the authorities, and it was generally conceded that he had reformed. In consequence, he was pardoned on February 15, 1929, and released from jail. It was shortly after this that he established his plant in Perkasio.

Edwards' "reform" was hailed as most remarkable, and he was called "one convict in a thousand to really go straight." Only recently, Judge Harry S. McDevitt, of Philadelphia, berated police officers for "hounding" (Continued on Page 3)

COST OF INSTRUCTION IN BUCKS IS VERY LOW

Is But $60.56 per Pupil in Average Daily Attendance

A COMPARISON IS GIVEN

Cost of instruction per pupil in average daily attendance at Bucks County public schools is low, in comparison to surrounding counties.

This cost in Bucks County is but $60.56, as compared to: Delaware, $94.66; Montgomery, $85.94; Lehigh, $64.32; Northampton, $62.20.

The annual expenditure per pupil in Bucks County in average daily attendance, including capital outlay, according to tabulations made by office of superintendent of Bucks County schools, J. Harry Hoffman, is $126.58. Other counties compare as follows: Delaware, $206.91; Montgomery, $170.64; Lehigh, $128.72; Northampton, $119.49.

The tabulations show superintendent Hoffman points out "that the school districts of our county as a unit have not in the past been unreasonable in school expenditures when compared with districts of other counties as a unit, or when compared with the state average." The facts from which computations were made were collected by the Division of Statistical Research of the Department of Public Instruction.

A comparison of the number of pupils per teacher and supervisor in several counties is here shown: Delaware, 23.1; Montgomery, 24.1; Berks, 26.9; Chester, 26.2; Bucks, 27.2; state average, 27.3; Northampton, 27.4; Lehigh, 27.9; Philadelphia, 28.8.

Tabulation of average teacher salaries in the state and counties shows: State, $1612.16; Delaware, $1779.74; Montgomery, $1775.70; Lehigh, $1,556.40; Northampton, $1533.98; Chester, $1368.12; Berks, $1536.19; Lancaster, $1303.94; Philadelphia, $2468.28; Bucks, $1225.58.

DETECTIVE RUSSO CHIEF WITNESS; ARNWINE CASE

Mother of Slain Girl Followed On Stand by Daughter, Corinne Rempfer

SEVERAL ARE CALLED

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 25.—Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo was the chief witness in the trial of Charles Arnwine, Newtown, accused of the murder of Frances Rempfer, Newtown, when court convened for the afternoon session yesterday.

Arnwine's attorney, J. Leslie Kilcoyne, developed that there were no bullet holes in the girl's clothing. Holding up Frances' little pink brassiere, he pointed out a black spot on it and asked Dr. John J. Sweeney, Bucks County Coroner, if there was any doubt in his mind that the spot was a powder burn.

"None whatever," was the reply. "Does that not indicate to you that the pistol was held between the brassiere and the breast when it was fired?"

"It does." The Coroner then standing on the witness stand, demonstrated on his own chest with a pistol held in his hand, how it would have been necessary to hold the pistol for such a wound to have been self-inflicted, and insisted he did not think it probable because of the extremely awkward position required.

Dr. Sweeney said he saw no powder marks on Frances' hands and did not think if there had been any they would have been wiped away by exposure.

Detective Russo told the jury how Arnwine, typical smalltown "sheik" and "wise guy," had first sneered and snickered when questioned by the detective who was investigating Frances' disappearance.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn brought out in his questioning that Russo had first questioned Arnwine about the missing girl on November 22, ten days after her disappearance and three days before her body was found, because it was known he had associated with her.

After he had treated the whole thing as a joke and defied the detective, laughing and sneering at him, he freely admitted he had frequently had relations with Frances.

So strongly was he suspected of knowing something about her disappearance that Russo got her father to swear out a warrant, based on Arnwine's own admissions, and he was being held in jail without bail when the body was found November 26.

Questioned again under warning he was "in a bad spot," Arnwine finally told the detective he would tell the truth and said: "Frances committed suicide."

He went on to tell the detective he had been sitting in his car with her when he saw she was toying with a pistol which she was swinging on one finger. Suddenly "there was a flash and the gun went off," he told Russo.

Russo said he next confronted Arnwine with the fact the bullet entered the breast and ran downward and asked the prisoner to explain how she could have shot herself in the manner he explained.

Arnwine made no answer, but later asked to see the District Attorney and to him, in the presence of a number of others, made a new confession that he had shot Frances as part of a death pact, whereby he was to kill her and then himself, but after shooting her, lost his nerve and wasn't able to end his own life.

Arnwine's repudiated confession, made public in its entirety for the first time, set forth in the opening paragraph that it was made of Arnwine's own free will, that no threat or force or coercion had been used to (Continued on Page 2)

'But "Squirms" As He Retells of Their Midnight Rendezvous

INSISTS HE LOVED HER

District Attorney Attempts To Show Arnwine Was "Rustic Romeo"

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 25.—Without a trace of emotion, Charles Arnwine, called the "village Romeo," took the witness stand again today and under cross-examination, reiterated his intimacies with pretty, Utahn-haired Frances Rempfer, for whose death the State seeks to place him in the electric chair.

A crowd of 800 spectators jammed into every niche and corner of the court room, sat intensely quiet as District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn attempted to tear down the suicide explanation advanced by Arnwine for the girl's death.

In his efforts to find a flaw in his defendant's repudiation of his suicide pact confession, Eastburn forced Arnwine to repeat his story of the circumstances leading to the death of the high school sophomore last November 13th, when she slipped out of her home to keep a midnight tryst with her lover.

"Were you in love with Frances?" asked Eastburn.

"Yes, I was in love with Frances and she was in love with me too," Arnwine declared.

"I went with her frequently," Arnwine said, explaining in detail his more intimate relations with the girl.

Arnwine squirmed about in the witness chair as he retold in a lifeless monotone of the midnight rendezvous with the dead girl; automobile rides to secluded spots and their love affair. He said the girl had taken her own life rather than be separated from him by her parents.

Under questioning he told of seeing the dead student from August until November when her parents refused to permit her to leave her home alone at night.

"All this time I loved Frances and told her so. She loved me and told me so."

"In spite of the fact that you are a married man and 29 years old; in spite of the fact that you knew her parents objected to your courtship, you continued to go with this 15 year old high school student in the manner you have advised?" asked Eastburn.

"Yes, that is true, I loved her," replied the defendant clearly.

Throughout his cross-examination, the District Attorney attempted to show that Arnwine was a type of rustic Romeo. He pressed for replies to questions into Arnwine's marital life with two wives from the second of whom testimony revealed he was separated after a marriage performed following the birth of a child.

Judges and attorneys conferred for an hour and 15 minutes over admitting a letter written by the Rempfer girl.

It was finally admitted and was read rapidly to the jury by Mr. Kilcoyne. Dated November 5, it was handed to him, Arnwine said, by Frances outside the Newtown High School on November 7.

"The works had all blown up again," the girl wrote, adding that because of what "Mrs. Vandergrift," a neighbor, had told her mother, a State policeman had been following her and Arnwine on their trysts for three weeks.

"Life at home has become plain to me," the girl wrote. "Dad won't look at me and detests me. Mother said to me: 'If you go to sleep and don't wake up, you will be doing me a favor.' When I stood up for you and (Continued on Page 4)

GOOD BUSINESS

When the people for one reason or another cannot repeal an unpopular law they nullify it in some way or another. Why not nullify the law of the depression which has so long resisted repeal?

Fourteen thousand farm women in 28 Georgia counties largely accomplished such nullification last year by marketing more than a million dollars' worth of the products of their own farms and kitchens. Fruits canned and marketed by them brought $250,000. Poultry and dairy products and vegetables added another $300,000 to their incomes. And they saved another $50,000 by making for their own use clothing having that value at retail prices.

The efforts of these women point the surest way out of the present dilemma, not only for the farmer but for the manufacturer, merchant and individual. These efforts have furnished convincing proof that there is a way out.

Home marketing keeps money at home and in circulation. It is necessary at this time that every community buy more of its own products, because no community can afford to let a single dollar's worth of business slip through its fingers. Every dollar is needed at home by the jobless and the business-less.

It is good business, if not absolute necessity, which prompts one to buy from his neighbor that his neighbor may have the wherewithal to buy from him.

HISTORY OF CHEAP MONEY

When and if the United States debases its currency, let it do it in manly fashion, without trying to deceive itself about the object. There is but one excuse for currency deflation and that is to repudiate in part the debts people owe. To circumvent creditors. To carry the country through bankruptcy without calling a spade a spade. How much the currency would be deflated depends on how much debtors want to pay on the dollar.

An Iowa farm editor laments because England "played us for a bunch of suckers" by going off the gold standard. That may be, but, while that may have been the British game, the real suckers were the English themselves. They struggle in their own trap.

Currency deflation is no cure-all. It may look fuzzy and warm to some but that is merely to lure the unwary victim. Underneath are spines which can be cruelly sharp.

Is there any country in the world better off today for having gone off the gold standard or for having debased its currency by other methods? The United States should be guided by the answer to that question. If it can be answered in the affirmative, then it is an experiment the country might safely try. If investigation discloses that deflation has never effected a cure, then it would be folly to plunge heedlessly into the same bottomless pit.

When one man beats another's game it encourages a lot of easy marks.

It seems easier for a man to be amiable with the world when he is making a lot of money.

When the four-hour work day arrives it will not make much difference on the golf links.

It is the year 1690. The "Centaur" sailing from the West Indies for England is captured by the cut-throat Tom Leach, who, on board his vessel, "The Black Swan," has long terrorized ships on the Spanish Main. Passengers aboard the "Centaur" are Priscilla Harradine, daughter of the late Sir John Harradine, Captain-General of the Leeward Isles; Major Sands, Sir John's middle-aged assistant, who hopes to marry Priscilla; and Monsieur Charles de Bernis, gallant, young Frenchman. De Bernis was a lieutenant of the notorious buccaneer, Henry Morgan, who reformed to enter the service of his King and rid the seas of pirates. Morgan has offered a reward for the capture of Leach. After seizing the "Centaur," Leach murders the captain and crew. The passengers are spared a like fate through De Bernis' wit. He introduces Priscilla as his wife and the Major as his brother-in-law. He then tells the pirate chief a convincing story about his leaving Morgan to search for Leach and enlist his aid in capturing a Spanish plate fleet worth a king's ransom. It is agreed that De Bernis is to take command of the "Centaur" and lead Leach in "The Black Swan" to the treasure. Major Sands, who dislikes De Bernis because of Priscilla's interest in the Frenchman, believes the Frenchman to be in league with Leach. De Bernis assures Priscilla and the skeptical Major that they are in no immediate danger. Pierre, De Bernis' servant, warns his master that Leach intends to double-cross him and not give him his share of the loot. De Bernis tells Leach that "The Black Swan" is too slow and needs careening, adding that if he were in command of the "Centaur" at the time of its capture, he would have outwitted and probably sunk "The Black Swan." Leach retorts, "Outsailing me is one thing; sinking me, another."

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

"A ship that can be outsailed may be sunk if the other is skillful and resolutely handled. In a sea-fight mobility is all. To swing into position swiftly, to loose a broadside, and to be off again, with masts in line, showing the narrowest mark to your opponent, that is the whole art of sea-fighting. And this the Centaur could have done, and would have done, had I been in her master's place. I'd have turned and twisted about you like a panther about an elephant, taking my chance to strike before ever your harnessed keel would answer the helm to ward the blow."

Leach shrugged contemptuously. "Maybe ye would, and maybe ye wouldn't. But whether ye would or whether ye wouldn't, what's this to do with our destination?"

"Aye," said the fiery-faced Ellis. "Let's hear something besides boasting from you."

"You'll hear something very unbecomingly of me, unless you practice civility yourself," he said coldly answered.

Leach smote the table with his fist. He roared, "Is it just to be talked and talked until we fall to quarreling, or are we to come to business?" I ask thee again, Charley, what's all this to do with our destination?"

"Everything. What I've been saying is meant to show you that you are in no case to go into serious action; and ye're not to make the mistake of underrating the ships or the men of the plate fleet. They will be stout, well-found, well-manned frigates. The two ships we possess will readily account for them if properly handled. But you must first put yourself in case to handle them properly. The stake we play for is too heavy to admit of risks."

"Ye said they would have no more nor two hundred and fifty men between 'em."

"But they've seventy guns to our sixty, and better guns than ours, and they are three keels to two; clean, nimble keels. Will you go shackled into the fight?"

Some of the aggressiveness departed out of Leach. But not all of it. He still sought to swagger. "O'd rot you! Why make difficulties? I don't make them. They exist. I desire them removed."

"Removed?"

"Removed. Ye must careen the Black Swan before we come to this engagement."

"Careen?" Leach was aghast. "Careen?" he repeated, his brow black with disagreement.

"Ye've no choice unless you want to court disaster."

Bundry nodded, and his lips parted, obviously, it seemed to express agreement. But Leach did not give him time.

"Sink me, man! Does thee think I needs to be taught my trade?"

"If ye refuse to careen, ye'll prove that ye do."

"That's what thee says. But what thee says isn't gospel. With the Black Swan as she is, I'd be quite ready to face your three Spaniards; aye, and account for them. Don't let me hear any more about careening. If ye weren't a fool, ye'd realize that there's no time for it."

"Time and to spare. We've a full month before the plate fleet sails. And that's more than ye need to scour and grease your keel."

To prove him wrong again, as de Bernis had done, was merely to drive Leach to entrench himself in obstinacy, which is ever the last refuge of a stupid man. "Whether we've time or not, I'm not minded to do it. I'm not afeared enough of any Spaniard afloat. So leave that out. Let's come to business now. There's been enough idle talk. What's our destination?"

For a long moment de Bernis calmly considered him across the table. Then he tossed off the punch in his pannikin, pushed back his chair, and rose.

"Since ye're determined, that's the end of the matter. To engage the plate fleet with a ship in the foul state of the Black Swan is, as I said before, to court disaster. And that is something I never court. As for your destination, you may make it what you please."

The three of them stared up at him in stupefaction, incredulously, reluctant to believe what he seemed to convey.

"What d'ye mean?" cried Ellis at last.

"That if Captain Leach chooses to sail his ships and his men to destruction, I'll be no party to it. You can seek other enterprises; merchantment like the Centaur, with cargoes of logwood and hides, cocoa and spices. I'll be wishing you good-day."

"Sit down!" Leach bawled at him. The Captain had come to his feet in his anger. But Monsieur de Bernis remained standing. "Do you wish to reconsider?"

"It's thee as had better consider. Thee'd better consider how we stand. Ye're aboard my ship, and, by heaven, I'll have no mutineers. Ye're here for a purpose, and that purpose ye'll fulfill."

"In my own way. On my own terms," said de Bernis, still imperious.

"In my way, dost hear? In my way, I am master here."

"Ah? And if I refuse?"

"Ye'll maybe end on the yard-arm. Maybe worse."

"So!" said de Bernis. He raised his brows. He looked down his nose at Leach, considering him as he might have considered some curious and not too pleasant specimen. "Do you know, Captain, that I have a suspicion that this crew of yours takes an interest in me, particularly since they've learnt I am to bring them to Spanish gold?"

"They'll require to know why you are hanging me, Tom. What shall you tell them? That it is because I refuse to let you lead them to destruction? That it is because I insist that you shall take measures to make victory assured? Is that what you will tell them?"

He watched the dark, evil face before him; saw the expression change; saw a lessening of the color glowing through his tan. He looked at the other two. In the face of Ellis he saw a reflection of the Captain's discomfiture. Bundry's looked almost distressed, and it was Bundry who spoke.

"When all's said, Captain, Bernis isn't altogether wrong."

"I care nothing . . ." Leach was beginning, rallying his obstinacy, when Ellis interrupted him.

"We have to care, Captain. Scupper me! We have to. And that's the fact. What the devil! Where's the sense o' quarrelling when our interests are all the same. Bernis wants to do his best for us all as well as for himself. What if his courage be less than your own, Tom?"

"Caution isn't altogether a fault," came from Bundry. "As a seaman I know him to be right about the state of the ship and the rest. If we were pressed for time, we might take a chance. But since we've time in hand, a' heaven's name let us spend it in making her properly seaworthy."

Thus Leach found himself abandoned by his own officers, and by this defection realized that at present it was de Bernis who held the trumps. By the secret in his possession of the whereabouts of that plate fleet, he could constrain them to his ways and they could use no constraint with him.

He controlled himself. He stamped down his anger, flung over it a pretence almost of bonhomie.

"Aye, ye're right. Where's the sense o' quarrelling? I can admit a fault. It's the way ye goes about things. Charley, Thee's all quills like a hedgehog. A' heaven's name, sit down, and fill your can, and let's agree things friendly." He pushed the jack of rum across, with a propitiatory grin. Then he sat down again.

Monsieur de Bernis allowed himself to be propitiated. He permitted no faintest expression of triumph to escape him. He inclined his head a little, in acknowledgment, resumed his seat, and poured as he was invited.

"You agree, then, to careen? That is settled?"

"Why, since not only you but Bundry here also thinks it's necessary, I suppose we must. Though frankly I'm not o' your ways o' thinking. But there. . . It's agreed, yes."

"In that case," said de Bernis, "the destination I came to discuss with you, our immediate destination, should be the Albuquerque Keys. There's an island there—Maldita—uninhabited, and well known to me of old, with a cove in which you can hide a dozen ships, and a long shelving beach that was made for careening. There's not a better place in all the Caribbean. You can lie snug there, and unsuspected, and it's convenient for another reason. . . ." He paused, raising an impressive forefinger. "It lies within an easy two days' sail of the spot at which I mean to intercept the Spanish plate fleet."

subjects that received the most attention at the convention were those that touched on economies and possible tax reduction. If the present system does not suit them it is the fault of the State Legislature for not changing it and not the Directors who must follow it as long as it is a law.

But keep this one thought in mind—road appropriations $114,000,000 and school appropriations $56,000,000. And now the Governor wants to put the $19,000,000 received from the Federal Government for relief into his road scheme.

Don't let the smoke screen thrown around the school question draw your eyes from the road expenditures.

falls for the week's adjournment, technically the legislature is considered in session until Saturday night. As a result, both chambers of the legislature are kept open, lighted, and heated as long as the members wish.

As a result of the comforts which the state offers, members who "week-end in Harrisburg" do their reading and writing at their desks. As long as they remain at the desks the great chandeliers with their thousands of bulbs must remain lighted.

Electricians who wait courteously until they may extinguish the lights suggest it might be better for the state to pay twice the ten cents a mile allowed for transportation if such members went home and saved the public's electric light bill.

Detective Russo Chief Witness; Arnwine Case

obtain the statement, and that no promises had been made to Arnwine. "Frances told me that her mother was beating her and during the week of November 7, 1932, we exchanged several notes," the confession said.

"As a result of these notes we agreed to meet on Sunday morning, November 13, 1932, and join in a suicide pact. "On Saturday night, November 12, I saw Frances in the movies but did not speak to her."

"About 1.40 the next morning I met her on Penn street in Newtown, near the White Hall Hotel, with my car."

"After I met Frances she got in the front seat with me and I drove the car to State and Penn streets and then south on State street to a road which comes on the Newtown pike at the George School woods, where I turned left and went about half a mile to a woods known as Double Woods, where I pulled my car off the road into a road running through the woods.

"I do not know how long Frances and I were there, but it must have been over an hour, and we were talking about what we intended to do. Frances said that we might as well get it over with and I said good bye to her. At that time we were both on the front seat, I was on the left hand side back of the wheel and Frances was sitting on the seat and leaning up against me."

"I had a .32-calibre revolver."

"After I had said good-bye to Frances, I took the revolver in my right hand, placed it against her body on the left side near the heart and fired it. I fired only one shot and Frances did not move or say anything after the shot was fired."

"It had been my intention after I had shot Frances to kill myself and we had been talking about that, but after I shot her, I lost my nerve and I was pretty much excited. I didn't do anything at all for several minutes, I can't say how long."

"After I had gotten myself together, I took hold of Frances' shoulders and under her arms and pulled her out underneath the wheel and carried her over a pile of rubbish which was near where my car was parked."

"I cannot say exactly how far it was away or exactly how far I carried her. When I got her to the rubbish pile, I laid her on the ground."

Mrs. Corinne Rempfer, mother of Frances Marie Rempfer, found shot to death in a woods near Newtown, November 26th, was followed on the witness stand yesterday in the trial of Charles Arnwine, accused of her daughter's murder, by her 13-year old daughter, Corinne.

Corinne, a tall, well-developed child, looking much older than her stated age, told the jury she slept with her sister Frances, but was not awakened when she left during the night of November 12th. The girl thought she heard footsteps during the night, and in the morning she said, the alarm clock in the room had been set for one o'clock, and half run down, but she had not heard it.

Attorney J. Leslie Kilecayne, defense counsel, definitely indicated by his cross-examination of other witnesses that Arnwine's defense will be that, Frances killed herself, and that he in a panic disposed of the body by throwing it on a rubbish pile a mile from Newtown.

Stacy B. Brown, Newtown undertaker, who prepared the body for burial, said that an abrasion on the fore-finger could not have been caused by exposure. Coroner John J. Sweeney said the bullet wound was on upper side of the breast, and the pistol must have been pressed close.

John Coupe, Newtown automobile dealer, told the jury he was one of the party who found the body. He had known Frances about two years, and was able to identify her. The body lay under a mattress, he stated, but he did not make a thorough examination, but saw at once she was dead. Brown, the undertaker, testified he went to the woods to get the body, and found the body lying face up, both hands down at the sides. The garments were somewhat disarranged.

Mr. Brown testified that in preparing the body for burial he found powder burns around the bullet wound. The bullet had passed through the body, and lodged just under the skin about three inches above the waist line on the left of the back. There was a bruise on the left leg.

Boyd Hutchinson, Newtown, member of the searching party, and who was really the first to discover the body, described its finding. Harold Dando, state policeman, described incidents attending the finding, and taking Arnwine to the spot the next day, and of finding the girl's gloves and an empty revolver shell.

him while he was attempting to continue going straight.

Since his arrest, which directly connected him with the armed hold-up of the Accommodation Coal Yard office in Philadelphia, he has been revealed in an entirely different light.

He has confessed, according to Acting Superintendent of Police LeStrange, that he has been training bandits, sending out inexperienced men with old robbers, and acting as "finger man" by selecting places to be robbed and mapping the robberies.

He also confessed, LeStrange said, to engineering the robbery of the Diamond Coal Company, Philadelphia, a month ago, where bandits got $600. The last robbery, at the Accommodation Coal office, also in Philadelphia, occurred Saturday night, when between $400 and $500 was taken.

A captain in the Cuban army, who occupies a position of trust and responsibility in the Machado organization, was authority for the statement that a number of young girls of student age are known to be identified with the organization. Although proving it is difficult. These girls are reported to actually carry bombs, on occasions, when their male comrades would be more likely to be suspected. A military fiesta was cancelled in Havana a few weeks ago when reports reached the secret police that three girls would carry the bombs in an "ABC" attack.

It is purely a Cuban affair. Foreigners are not molested. The spots picked out for bombing are either public buildings, or places where tourists seldom congregate.

FIRST CAGE GAME TO BE PLAYED MONDAY NIGHT

The first game of the Bristol Basketball League Championship series will take place Monday night on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. This was definitely decided at a meeting of the managers and directors of the organization held in the A. O. H. hall, after the second half of the race had been conceded to the Third Ward A. C.

The Warders were declared winners of the second half race with six victories and one defeat. Paterson Parchment Paper Company and the Hibernalians finished in a deadlock for second place with five wins and two defeats. These teams will battle in the first game of the playoff.

Herman Batzle, who refereed the Bristol Series in a satisfactory manner three years ago, was engaged as the playoff referee with Bud David, Bristol League referee to assist as an umpire.

The price of admission has been slightly raised for the playoff to protect the regular patrons of the league.

No Emotion Shown By Arnwine As He Takes Stand

argued with her, she said: "If you prefer him (Arnwine) to your father and mother, this is no longer a fit home for you."

"She is going to send me away some place, and I want to get away from this place. If I could only get away myself. But she intends to have you arrested, but if they do that, I want the same thing you get. You are the only one I love and I can't live without you. If I have to keep on living here, I won't be anything but a servant maid for the whole rotten bunch. All my love and kisses, Charles."

"Charles Arnwine, did you kill Frances Remper?"

"I did not."

This was the dramatic end to the night session of Bucks County court last night in the case of Charles Arnwine, 25, Newtown foundryman, charged with the murder of Frances Marie Remper, 15, Newtown high school sophomore.

A crowd, more than enough to fill the spacious court room, milled about the brown-stone building and restlessly stood upon the stone steps for an hour before the doors were opened for the evening session. It was a jovial and good-natured group. There were folks from all sections of the county, and they had been attracted by curiosity and were in a happy frame of mind. Many "wise-cracks" were made, and little indication did the crowd give of the fate that might befall the man whose trial they were to witness.

Immediately following the opening of court, J. Leslie Kilcoyne, Bristol attorney, defending Arnwine, addressed the jury.

"There has been a heavy burden upon my shoulders up until now, but that burden is going to be removed very soon after we have presented our evidence in this case," said Attorney Kilcoyne.

"There has been nobody but me between this defendant, Charles Arnwine, and the possibility of the electric chair."

"The conduct of the public press in this case has been scandalous. The first witness I am going to place on the stand will be Charles Arnwine himself."

Arnwine told of obtaining his brother's revolver, slipping it into his coat pocket, and driving to meet Frances to go to Double Woods to carry out their alleged suicide pact. In his machine they went to Double Woods. "It was moon-light," he said, "and no light was in my car. I asked her if she was going through with it. I said: 'Have you changed your mind?' 'If I had changed my mind I wouldn't have come out,' Frances then replied. I asked her what all had happened at home, and she said her mother had beaten her all week. She asked me what I had brought with me, and I showed her the revolver.

"This is all I could get," I said. She said 'Let me see it.' She laid it in her lap. I said 'This is foolish.' I told her I didn't think I was able to go through with it. She said 'I've made up my mind.' I said 'There must be some other way out of it.'"

Arnwine described to the jury how he was afraid to grab the revolver from Frances for fear it would be discharged. He told of Frances removing her light gloves and laying them in her lap.

"Then I noticed she was wearing her good black dress. I said 'Why are you wearing it tonight?' She said 'I wore it the first time we went out together. Mother took it away from me, but tonight I decided to wear it for the last time.' After that I tried to get her to change her mind, but as I turned to throw my cigarette out of the car window I heard the report of a pistol, and her body fell over against me. The death rattle was in her throat. I was scared."

Arnwine described how he had placed his hands beneath the girl's arms and dragged her to the spot in the woods where he laid her. "I pulled the mattress over her," Arnwine told the court he did not know that he had placed the body in a rubbish heap and denied he placed her head in a peach basket.

Arnwine on the witness stand claimed the reason he made his confession stating he had pulled the trigger of the gun was because he had been questioned by Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and state police until he was weary.

He said that Corporal William J. Snyder, of state police, talked to him in a friendly manner, in an ante-room of the district attorney's office on the afternoon of his confession. "The corporal," said Arnwine, "told me I was in a tough spot. I said I knew it. He said I wouldn't have a chance in court. He said 'I believe your story but with the evidence we have against you, you won't have a chance. You better plead guilty and save yourself from the electric chair. I said I couldn't plead guilty to something I hadn't done. 'Think it over,' said Snyder. I thought it over. I knew I didn't have any money and no counsel. I went into the district attorney's office." District Attorney Eastburn sent for a stenographer and then told Arnwine that he (Eastburn) would dictate the statement and that if Arnwine had any corrections to make to do so. The statement was prepared, typed, and Arnwine said he signed six copies.

Women Assume Unusual
Titles For A Program

Mrs. Un Rest, Mrs. A. V. Atrix, Mrs. Si N. Tist, and all the rest of the group prominent in world affairs were at the meeting of Bristol Travel Club yesterday afternoon, these attendants being "created" by Mrs. Joseph Smith, who had charge of the current events section of the program.

In a novel manner did Mrs. Smith present topics of interest, introducing the following who gave accounts of topics pertaining to their titles: Mrs. Un Rest, Mrs. Griffith L. Williams; Mrs. A. V. Atrix, Mrs. Theodore B. Megargee; Mrs. Si N. Tist, Mrs. J. J. Willaman; Mrs. I. N. Formation, Mrs. Walter Pitzonka; Miss Well Fare, Mrs. Frank Lehman; Mrs. O. X. Ford, Mrs. John Dodds. Mrs. Smith read excerpts from articles on Radio City in New York. Her program was closed with the well-known quotation from Lincoln that each man should find himself each day "a little wiser than he was the day before."

Another speaker of the afternoon introduced by Mrs. George Ardrey, chairman of the legislative committee, who had charge of the program, was Mrs. Maude Stuckert, Newtown, who spoke on some of the current bills before the Federal and state legislatures. Mrs. Stuckert briefly explained the points of each bill, and many questions pertaining to such were raised in the minds of the club women present.

Mrs. Ardrey also presented Miss Margaret Black, who yesterday made her first public appearance as a piano soloist.

During the short business meeting which preceded the numbers of the afternoon, Mrs. Horace H. Burton, president, read a report of expenditure of the money received at the first card party sponsored by the club this year. The funds were expended for shoes, stockings and underclothing for the needy.

Mrs. Earl Tomb announced that Miss Eunice Williams has arranged a tour of inspection of the green houses of Bristol Flower Growers, which will occur Friday, March 3rd, at three p. m. All Travel Club women are invited. Miss Williams will give information regarding care of house plants and indoor gardens.

Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn reported on the first meeting of the discussion group of the club. She urged all members of the club to join the group. The next session will take place at the Eastburn home Monday evening, March 13th, the subject to be announced later.

Mrs. Parke Wetherill, who had charge of the food exchange, yesterday, announced the affair was a financial success.

Founders Day of P. T. A.,
Andalusia, is Observed

ANDALUSIA, Feb. 25.—The regular monthly meeting of the Andalusia P. T. A. was held in the school house Monday evening. H. Bowers Peters, president, presided. Founders' Day was celebrated and a birthday party given by Miss Rae Komenarski's class, 4th grade, to the members of the association.

The program centered around the founders of the local P. T. A., Mrs. Alice M. Birney, and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. The acrostic Birney and Hearst was given by Doris Howarth, Joseph Kish, Raymond Howarth, Gloria Freas, Edward Katzmar, Zola Laster, Jean Mudie, William Clarke, Stanley Windkos, Stephen Barger, Joseph Young, Helen Yorton, Marion Funk, teacher, Pauline Fries, agitated mother, and Robert Scarborough read the achievements of the P. T. A., and presented a picture of the founders to the association.

Another feature was a playlet, stressing the seven cardinal points of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Pauline Fries represented education; Clara Davis, health and safety; Marie Stillworthy, home membership; Marion Funk, master of tools and techniques; Jean Mudie, vocational and economical effectiveness; Zola Laster, citizenship; Helen Yorton, wise use of leisure; Wilson Stuckhouse, torchbearer; Mr. H. B. Peters, president's comments. Charles V. Penner, past president, read "The Voice of the Founders." Each member in this play lighted several candles on the birthday cake.

The business meeting consisted of discussion of the recent card party on which the P. T. A. certainly made out well.

Misses Dorothea Wenner and Ethel Hartman rendered piano solos; George Knoll, Dorothea Wenner and Ethel Hartman gave instrumental music.

Miss Komenarski's class won the P. T. A. attendance banner for having the largest number of votes by members and friends. Sandwiches and coffee were served during the social hour.

Support Those Merchants Of The HOME TOWN LEAGUE

Judge for yourself--after reading this message --whether or not you belong to the HOME TOWN LEAGUE. The fact remains that the HOME TOWN LEAGUE belongs to you!

Why is this true? Because, while the HOME TOWN LEAGUE works for the success of you and everyone else in this community, its success is dependent on you.

A very logical idea lies behind the HOME TOWN LEAGUE. It is the idea of civic-cooperation. It is the idea of safeguarding our homes and businesses and jobs by buying from those who buy from us, and who help us directly or indirectly.

This idea is sponsored here in Bristol by the following group of progressive merchants. You will recognize each one of them.

They have adopted the emblem shown here, and have posted it prominently in the windows of their stores.

This emblem says to you:--
"Patronize this store." Its owner is helping you and your home town by favoring the products of reliable manufacturers who, directly or indirectly, spend money in this community to produce or sell the products they make.
